August 20 — August 26, 2020

From the Interim Pastor Walk Jones

I was ordained to the gospel ministry thirty one years ago today. On August 20, 1989 Charleston-Atlantic Presbytery ordained and installed me as pastor of the Presbyterian Church on Edisto Island, SC. Nancy and I were very young and we thought we were so mature. We had been married the last two years I was in seminary, we were trying to start a family. Those were exciting times.

One retired Army officer in the congregation -- who I grew to trust and admire, even love -- said, "Why you are just like a second lieutenant. In the Army we don't trust second lieutenants with anything and here you are pastor of this whole church. I'll look out for you." Col. Parker Connor was one of the many men and women in that church who took us under their wings and helped us. Sgt. Rooney was another mentor. He taught me so much about being an adult man and father. He taught me to drink Orange Crush, read the tide-tables, and throw a cast net for shrimp. We had lots of military retirees on that island in Charleston County South Carolina.

I write about my ordination and that fine church because in some ways. First, Ocala reminds me of the church on Edisto. Many members are retired, the community is growing, change is in the air. Folks look to God and the church for stability and direction. They wonder about young people and the future of the church. Just as I felt comfortable and called to be at Edisto, I feel that here in Ocala. Anniversaries are a time to look back, to look forward, and to ask for God's guidance.

Next August, if the pandemic is under control, maybe we can have cake and properly celebrate the anniversary of my ordination.
